Avco Outlines $15 Million Plans

A $15,000,000 research and development center equipped with permanent facilities for basic and applied science will be constructed in Wilmington by Avco Manufacturing Corporation's Research and Advanced Development Division, according to a formal announcement made last night by Dr. Lloyd P. Smith, president of the division.

Speaking at a banquet for more than 100 of the nation's leading scientists, engineers, government officials and businessmen, held at the Somerset Hotel, the noted physicist unveiled a scale model of the new facility and outlined the potential of the research and development center, which will be in operation by mid-1958.

The Research and Advanced Development Division of Avco, one of the 100 largest manufacturing corporations for defense and industry in the country, was organized 14 months ago. At present it is concerned largely with research and development of advanced missile systems for the Department of Defense.

Temporarily, the division is located in Lawrence and at the Avco Research Laboratory in Everett. Both these facilities and research departments from several other Avco divisions will be housed permanently in the ultramodern, functional center at Wilmington.

Designed by the architectural firm of Pereira & Luckman of New York City and engineered by Metcalf & Eddy of Boston, the center extends one-fifth of a mile and covers a 16-acre area. Four harmonizing buildings provide over 400,000 square feet of floor space.

Three of the structures lie in a basic "T" pattern within the evergreen-wooded site The first is a two-story research building containing offices and laboratories, with natural lighting provided by two interior light wells and continuous exterior windows Its counterpart is the development building, with outdoor illumination from three interior light wells, which will house the development and electronics offices and laboratories.

A commons building forms the stem of the "T." This structure has a third-story setback and provides for executive and administrative offices, a library, circular auditorium and cafeteria.

All three office buildings are of reinforced concrete, flat slab construction with air conditioning throughout.

The fourth and largest building in the complex is set forward of the research, development and administrative quarters. Constructed as a prototype testing and fabrication area, this 172,500-square-foot building is shielded by a wooded, naturally sound-baffling area, but at the same time joined to the office buildings by covered, all-weather passageways. It will feature a high bay and partial mezzanine and will be of steel frame construction.

Total area of the site for the Avco research and development center is 100 acres, located on Lowell Street (Rte.

VIEWING SCALE MODEL OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT CENTER

Dr. Arthur Kantrowitz (left), director of the Avco Research Laboratory, and Dr. Lloyd P. Smith, president of the Research and Advanced Development Division, survey landscapped model of the permanent facility to be built by Avco Manufacturing Corporation. The architectural complex provides structures for research, administration, development and fabrication, located within a 100-acre, evergreen-wooded site in Wilmington, Massachusetts. Both former faculty members at Cornell University, Dr. Smith was chairman of the department of physics and director of the department of engineering physics, while Dr. Kantrowitz held a professorship in the Graduate School of Aeronautical Engineering.

Santa Claus Arrives In Woburn, Nov. 23

Santa Claus will arrive in Woburn on Friday, Nov. 23 the day after Thanksgiving. Santa will fly to Woburn by Helicopter and will land at the Woburn High School Field at 1:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

A parade, will form at the school and proceed to Woburn center. Santa will be aboard a float, seated in his sleigh, and will have lollypops for the children. The Immaculate Conception Drum and Bugle Corps will lead the parade through the center of the city.

The arrival of Santa, will mark the opening of the Christmas Shopping Season in the City of Woburn. The event is sponsored by the Retail Division of the Woburn Chamber of Commerce.

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD FOR ANDREW PUPA

Andrew D. Pupa, 18 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Borghetti of Kendall St., passed away on Saturday, Nov. 17, following a lingering illness. Funeral services were conducted at 8 a.m. on Tuesday from his home, followed by a solemn high mass of requiem at St. Thomas' Church.

Funeral arrangements were under the direction of William S. Cavanaugh and Son. Interment was at the Wildwood Cemetery.

ED SHELLEY ON CONCERT COMMITTEE

The talented and lively Glee Clubs of Boston College and Emmanuel College, numbering one-hundred and fifty voices, will combine in what promises to be one of the outstanding Concerts of the year at Symphony Hall, Boston on Sunday evening, Nov. 8.

Under the direction of C. Alexander Peloquin of Boston College and Dr. Rodolphe E. Pepin of Emmanuel, the Glee Clubs are energetically working to perfect the fine program that is planned. There will be numbers by each Club, renditions by the combined Clubs, and specialties by small groups from each Club, individually and jointly. The music by the piano duet, the well known Concert Pianists, Arthur MacKenzie and Beth Flanagan, and that of the great organ of Symphony Hall will provide the finishing touches to a program arranged to suit the tastes of all.

The best seats in the hall have been priced at only $2.00 each, with the other seats scaled at $1.50 and $1.25.

Tickets are on sale at the Symphony Hall Box Office, and at Filenes and Jordans in Boston, and through the local Holy Name Society.

Serving on the Concert Committee locally is Edward Shelley of Wilmington.

Proceeds from the Concert will be used to defray the expense of the Decent Literature Campaign conducted by the Holy Name Society and the remainder will be donated to the Father Coppens Fund establishing a Seminary Scholarship in memory of the Chaplain who was killed in the Korean War.

LOOKING OVER THE CONCERT PROGRAM to be presented at Symphony Hall on Sunday, November 25, at 8 p.m. are, left to right, Rev. David Carroll, S. J., Moderator of the Boston College Musical Clubs, Robert F. Walsh of Wollaston, President of the Boston College Glee Club; Frank C. Hart, Archdiocesan Special Activities Chairman for the Holy Name Society; Mary C. Gardenier, of Winthrop, President of the Emmanuel College Glee Club, and Dr. Rodolphe E. Pepin, Director of the Emmanuel College Glee Club.

NATIONAL POLIO POSTER CHILD - Little Marlene Olsen, four-year-old daughter of Air Force Capt. and Mrs. Arnold Olsen of 6 Marion Road, Burlington, has been named the 1957 March of Dimes poster child. She is the 12th in a parade of annual polio poster children. Stricken during the Massachusetts epidemic in the summer of 1955, Marlene represents the thousands of polio victims throughout the country who were aided by the 1956 March of Dimes. Marlene will tour the country to promote contributions to the 1957 fund raising drive of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to be held from Jan. 2-31.

NEIGHBOR GIRL IS POSTER GIRL

BURLINGTON, A blue-eyed, curly haired little girl from Burlington, Mass. has been named 1957 March of Dimes Poster Girl, it was announced today by Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Four-year-old Marlene Olson represents the thousands of polio victims in all parts of the country who were aided by the 1956 March of Dimes. The daughter of Air Force Capt. and Mrs. Arnold Olsen, Marlene and her family live at 6 Marion Road, Burlington, in order to be near Hanscom Field, Bedford, where her father is stationed. He is a combat veteran of the Korean Conflict.

Marlene's picture will be displayed on posters and coin canisters throughout the country during the 1957 fund raising drive from January 2-31. She is the twelfth in a parade of annual March of Dimes poster children, all polio victims.

The new poster girl symbolizes an unfinished polio job in a time of Salk vaccine success, for she will need treatment and care for years to come.

Marlene is one of the nearly 4,000 victims of the polio epidemic which swept Massachusetts in the summer of 1955. During those months, one out of seven cases in the country centered in this state. National Foundation chapters predict the after-effects will be felt for many years.

"I know that our family will remember that year for a long time," Marlene's mother says. "Marlene will need help in her personal fight against polio. Doctors say she'll probably have to wear braces until she's in her teens."

Forty-two inches tall and weighing 33 pounds, the little poster girl's right leg is paralyzed. She wears a full brace on her leg and walks with wooden crutches.

Marlene spent most of August 1955 in the Murphy Army Hospital in Waltham. According to her mother, "The only nice thing I remember from that period was that as soon as Marlene's illness was diagnosed as polio, we got a letter from the Middlesex County Chapter of the March of Dimes. They offered us any help we needed, whether it was equipment or money or polio specialists. It was good to know that even with Massachusetts in the middle of a polio emergency, someone was thinking about our Marlene, and they were concerned enough to see that she got everything she needed."

Middlesex County Chapter had one-fourth of the total number of cases in the state during the epidemic. From the beginning the chapter has assisted in Marlene's care. She has had checkups regularly since she was stricken, including one last fall at Georgia Warm Springs Foundation.

The quiet, wide-eyed little girl is a miniature housewife and enjoys helping her mother. She plays with her three dolls and regards her 20-month-old sister, Karen, as a fourth.

Both Marlene's parents are from Everett. Captain Olsen was awarded a Distinguished Flying Cross May 12 this year for his work in a geophysics research project. Before entering Air Force cadet training in 1950, he served four years in the Navy. Mrs. Olsen is the former Marguerita Pike, a native of Somerville.

CITY ACCEPTS AUDUBON TREE

The idea of a living Christmas tree for the birds on Boston Common has long been a dream of the Massachusetts Audubon Society. On Nov. 28 that dream will become a reality. James A. Walsh, Deputy Park Commissioner, will accept for the City of Boston the donation of a Norway Spruce from the Society's most recent wildlife sanctuary, Drumlin Farm, in Lincoln. The tree, a particularly decorative specimen, was selected by Henry Draper, Resident Director of the sanctuary. Designated as "the Audubon Tree", it will be trimmed every year at Christmas time with edible delicacies for the birds.

The planting will take place on Wednesday morning, Nov. 28, at 10 o'clock on the Common near the corner of Boylston and Tremont Sts. The public is cordially invited to be present when Mr. Walsh accepts for the City the tree donated by the Audubon Society. It is expected that among the interested onlookers will be some of the avian beneficiaries. Their appreciation will be evident at the tree-trimming ceremonies the Wednesday before Christmas.

TRAFFIC TIP: You may be caught in a traffic jam and have to wait a minute or two for the line to move. Be patient and STAY IN LINE. Cars that weave between lanes disrupt the traffic pattern and cause confusion for everyone. Stay in line — stay in your lane, says the Triple-A.

SAFETY TIP: You'll be seen better at night if you'll wear something white, says the AAA. Wear a bright scarf if your other clothing is dark. When the car headlights hit you, the driver will know you're there. Wear something white when you're walking at night.

TRAFFIC TIP: Know the best way to town? Sometimes it's wise to travel the side-streets and stay away from the main traffic arteries. Choosing a route where traffic is lightest often gets you there sooner, advises the AAA.

IT'S EASY TO ENJOY "SUMMER DRIVING" ALL WINTER, AAA SERVICE EXPERTS SAYS

"With just a few simple precautions, winter driving can be as safe and enjoyable as driving in any other season," according to Stanley Gubala, Road Service Manager for American Automobile Association's Massachusetts Division.

While he never underestimates winter driving hazards and difficulties, Gubala emphasizes that "winter is no longer the time of hardship for motorists it was in the days of one-cylinder cars."

The AAA service expert says: "Aside from adding antifreeze to your car's radiator, changing to a winter grade oil, and having your car checked over, there's one important thing you must do to get your car ready for winter — make certain your battery has the power to do the job. Dead batteries cause more winter trouble than any other item. At 32 degrees your fully charged battery is only 65% efficient, if half charged it's only 32% efficient."

Gubala points out that today's automobiels are rugged machines capable of good performance under most conditions. "However, a thorough car inspection will pay off during the cold weather," he says. "It's just good sense to be sure your car is in tip-top condition."

The AAA service manager's personal check list is:

1. Check battery for cell condition and power. Replace if necessary.

2. Put in good quality antifreeze and check thermostat. A gasoline antifreeze additive will prevent frozen lines and hard starting. And don't forget windshield washer antifreeze.

3. Check radiator hoses for cracks and weak spots. Leaking antifreeze can prove costly and annoying.

4. Change crankcase, transmission, and differential oil. Heavy summer oil thickens in cold weather, causing increased drag and improper lubrication.

5. Check spark plugs and ignition system. Good electrical contacts make starting easier.

6. Fan belt adjustment should be checked. A loose or defective belt causes overheating and weakens the battery. Also check choke operation for smooth running and easy starting.

And for safety's sake the AAA service expert suggests:

1. Adjust brakes. Good brakes may save your life—winter or summer.

2. Check windshield wipers, blades, and defrosters. A snow-obscured windshield is dangerous.

3. Check headlights and stoplights.

4. Check muffler for perforations and leaks. Winter driving with closed windows and heater in operation make this a must.

5. Inspect snow tires and chains. Replace or repair as necessary. Added traction means added safety.

DISASTER CALENDAR OFFERED FREE

Packed with timely and useful information, including all-inclusive "What To Do In Time Of Disaster" charts and guidance, the 1957 St. Joseph Calendars, printed and distributed nationally by Plough, Inc., drug manufacturers, are expected to be more in demand than ever before.

The St. Joseph Calendars for 1957 will perform a helpful public service by featuring proven safeguards for protection of life and property, with such information furnished through cooperation of the American Red Cross, the Federal Civil Defense Administration and the U.S. Forest Service. In addition, there is a first aid section, covering antidotes and relief for everything from snake bites to sunstroke.

Good sound advice on what to do in event of floods, hurricanes, tornadoes and fires is graphically listed and illustrated in a special section of the 1957 St. Joseph Calendar. With the revised Civil Defense Air Raid Instructions chart goes this reminder: "Learn and live. Get into Civil Defense right now. Wherever you live, your Nation needs your help. The hydrogen bomb is described as "basically a very much bigger A-bomb. It creates a bigger problem - not a different kind of problem. And it means we must have a better and stronger Civil Defense. It also means that the support areas - the rural and smaller cities - must prepare to give immediate aid to cities which may be hit."

As for homemaking and child care tips, the 1957 St. Joseph Calendars are an encyclopedia of facts, based on everyday living, and include among the wide range of information such subjects as: Perspective On Parenthood; Let The Room Grow With The Child; Practical Hints for the Mother of A Sick Child; In Summer We Live Outdoors; How to Stretch Your Clothes Dollars; Second Baby Do's and Don'ts; and many others.

As always, the St. Joseph Calendars are filled with a storehouse of facts helpful to mother, dad, the children and all members of the family, with such data as daily weather forecasts, planting and fishing charts, times of sunrises and sunsets, moon phases, signs of Zodiac with horoscopes and other information Such broad range of facts make the St. Joseph Calendars one of the most popular in the nation and more than 5,000,000 are distributed annually.

Ask your drug dealer for a free 1957 St. Joseph Calendar, Almanac, Weather Chart, or mail your request to Plough, Inc., Memphis, Tennessee.

JACK WYRTZEN TO SPEAK AT ALL WILMINGTON EVANGELISTIC RALLY

Jack Wyrtzen, nationally known Evangelist, will preach at the "All Wilmington Evangelistic Rally" which will be held on Thursday evening, Dec. 6, 7:30 p.m. at the Grange Hall on Wildwood St. The rally is sponsored by the Wilmington Council of Churches. Plans are well under way for what promises to be the largest united evangelical effort for many miles around. Cottage prayer meetings are being held and all Christians are urged to inform their relatives and friends of the meeting.

The Council of Churches feels priviledged in having Mr. Wyrtzen as the Evangelist for the meeting. He has traveled the length and breadth of the country many times over during the past 15 years of his ministry, besides traveling abroad. He has recently returned from an Evangelistic Crusade which took him to many countries of Latin and South America. His ministry also includes the nationwide broadcast of the "Word of Life Hour" which is heard in this area every Saturday night at 7:30 p.m. on WNAC. A personal friend of Billy Grahams, he has worked very closely with Mr. Graham, one of the great Evangelists in the history of the church. Billy Graham, on a recent "Hour of Decision" broadcast payed tribute to Jack Wyrtzen and wished him God's blessings as Jack ventured out on an even greater scale in his radio ministry.

In the age of materialism, the greatest need of the world, our country, Wilmington, and the individual heart, is a true revival. Jesus Christ came that we might have life and have it more abundantly. Until hearts confess Christ as Lord and Savoir, there is no real joy in life on this earth nor hope of an eternal life of joy in heaven. The council of churches expects all Christians to carry out their obligation and pray for the revival of Wilmington.

Folks,

Let's count our blessings on this 346th festive Thanksgiving Day:

- We live on the free side of the IRON CURTAIN.
- We vote as we choose.
- We come and go as we choose.
- We fear no Gestapo.
- We fear no occupation army.
- Our children are free to play without fear of being slaughtered by the armed might of an unfriendly neighboring country.
- Siberian slave camps do not form a part of our routine.
- And, Folks, you and I are perfectly free to worship our Almighty God exactly as our consciences dictate.

As always,

MABEL

P. S. Happy Holiday.

THANKSGIVING EVE WORSHIP SERVICE SPONSORED BY WILMINGTON COUNCIL OF CHURCHES

A Thanksgiving Eve Worship service of meditation and Prayer will be held in the Wilmington Methodist Church, Wednesday evening, November 21, at 8 p.m. The Senior Choir of the Methodist will sing "Now Thank We All Our God," and Mr. Eliot Castillo, pastor of the Wilmington Baptist Church, Rev. Blaney, pastor of the Forest Street Congregational Church, and the Rev. Richard Harding pastor of the Methodist will share in the leadership of the service.

D. A. V. MEETS NEXT WEDNESDAY

The regular meeting of the D.A.P. will be held on Wednesday, Nov. 21, at 8:00 p.m. at headquarters on Grove Ave.

James Shine, representing the fourth district council, marched in the parade in Gloucester on Veterans Day. James Simpson was the chapters representative at the observances in Wilmington.

The Turkey night was very successful, over 180 lbs. of Turkey was awarded, along with Six 50 lbs. bags of potatoes, 10 carton of cigarettes and many other prizes.

ST. THOMAS NEWS

We can observe Thanksgiving Day by attending Mass and leaving a bundle of clothing at Villanova Hall for the Catholic Relief Services.

Next Sunday is Communion Sunday for the boys of the parish.

Gratitude is expressed for the donation you gave to the Indian Missionary last Sunday. It was a tribute to your good faith and charity.

FOURTH SON FOR THE LOUNSBURYS

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Lounsbury, of 829 Main St., announce the birth of a son, Richard James on Nov. 16, at Choate Memorial Hospital in Woburn. The couple has three other sons, Charles, Bruce and Robert.

Grandparent honors are being shared by Mr. and Mrs. James Lounsbury and Mr. George Nitsch.

"THE TIRELESS CARETAKER"

Sermon Topic At Wilmington Methodist Church, Sunday, November 25.

The Rev. Richard Harding will preach on the theme: "The Tireless Caretaker" on Sunday, November 25, at 9:15 and 11 a.m. The morning message will be based on a text from the 121st Psalm.

"He will not let your foot be moved, he who keeps you will not slumber. Behold he who keeps Israel will neither slumber nor sleep."

William Stickney, chairman of the annual church canvass will present the victory report during the worship hours, and a class of new members will be received into the church fellowship. This group of persons have made preparation by attending membership training during the past few weeks.

Parents of small children are reminded that a nursery class is held at 9:15 in the church, and at 11 a.m. the parsonage. Toddlers up to those three years of age may be brought to the nursery class. The regular Sunday School classes are held at both hours and families are again invited to worship while their children learn.

ST. DOROTHY'S NEWS

There will be no religious instruction classes on Saturday. Next Sunday is Communion day for the boys of the parish.

The Mass of Thanksgiving Day will be at 8:00 a.m. We should strive to come and give our thanks to God for countless blessings we of America enjoy. The Bishops Thanksgiving drive for clothing shoes and bedding for the people of Europe is still on. Kindly bring articles to the rectory this week.

We are grateful to Frank King and the ladies of the parish for the proceeds of Wednesday's Blitz. There will be no Blitz this week.

We are grateful to Mrs. Annie Joyce and her committee for the proceeds of Friday's Whist. Mrs. Gerald Schaina and her committee will conduct another Whist party Friday evening, at St. Dorothy's Hall for the parish building fund.

Banns are called for the first time for Henry Phillips and Irene Campos.

129) in Wilmington. The site is being developed by Cabot, Cabot & Forbes of Boston and necessitated a special town meeting at Wilmington last spring to rezone the site for industry. Construction will also be done by Cabot, Cabot & Forbes.

According to the architects the theme of the center is based on a modular concept permitting 100 percent expansion and rearrangement of space as required to meet future needs.

Eventually the Avco Research and Advanced Development Division will employ some 1500 personnel. In addition, many private scientists will visit the center on interim research projects or as consultants.

"To provide a good environment in which to perform scholarly and creative work," Dr. Smith said, "the Research and Advanced Development Division sought a place with superior intellectual, educational and cultural attributes. The greater Boston area provided such an environment. At the present time, some of us have friends on the M.I.T. and Harvard scientific and technical faculties and it is hoped that as time goes on a closer association between our scientists and engineers will develop, on the basis of significant technical accomplishment, in fields of mutual interest.

"In these surroundings," he continued, "Avco will be seriously devoted to the task of uncovering new technical fields, making significant contributions to our nation's security, developing new products for man's benefit and consciously endeavoring to create scientific 'break throughs' so important to the maintenance of the scientific and technological prestige of our country."

WOMAN'S CLUB MEETING

A most delightful program on the History of Wilmington was presented to the Woman's Club by the Brownies and Girl Scouts at their November meeting which was held at the Methodist Church Vestry.

Leaders who helped with the success of the program were: Mrs. Joseph Slater, Mrs. Leo McCormack, Mrs. Michael Rosa, Mrs. Oscar Lawrence, Mrs. John Smolski, Mrs. John MacGahon, Mrs. Lloyd Matthews, Mrs. Arnold Blake, Mrs. Edward Moore, Mrs. Ernest Farrell, Mrs. Robert Hastings, Mrs. James Durant and Mrs. Samuel Yentile.

The progam was in charge of Mrs. Thomas Marsh and Mrs. William Sussenburger. Accompaning the girls on the piano was Mrs. Hayward Bliss.

METHODIST CHURCH FAIR DEC. 5 and 6

The annual fair of the Methodist Church will be held on Dec. 5, and 6, with a Christmas theme in mind. The fair will open with a luncheon on Wednesday, Dec. 5. There will be a Tea Room open from 2:30 Wednesday afternoon until closing, and on Wednesday, evening the Intermediate M.Y.F. will put on a play. Tickets for the Luncheon may be reserved by calling Mrs. Harold Simes, OL 8-3329, or Circle Chairman.

The fair will open Thursday, Dec. 6, at 2:00 p.m. At 6:30 the Senior M.Y.F. will serve supper. Tickets for this supper may be reserved by calling Shirley Williamson at OL 8-3088.

Various tables of fancy work and cooked food will be available in the upper hall.

You may not hear the mewing cry of the baby otter as it frets for the return of its mother from the depths, but you are likely to see the almost human solicitude and effection shown as she fondles and caresses her offspring, rubs noses with it as if kissing, and takes it on her broad chest perhaps to sleep or at least travel de luxe as she swims on her back. A single young is the rule, but twins are known. Nursing is long, perhaps nearly a year, and the young stays with the family even after the next season's baby is born. The breeding and pupping season extend over most of the year.

Play, and perhaps curiosity, best characterize the sea otters' behavior. The old and young gambol and cavort in the water, doing cartwheels while chasing their own tails, or porpoising in pursuit of each other, or in sheer exuberance of pure animal spirits. When danger intrudes, they may raise their bodies out of the water, hold this position, and then dive quickly out of sight.

The otter can wash its face like a cat, scratch itself like a dog, and rear up like a merman. There is no end to the interest which this intelligent and mysterious animal holds for the human spectator. Small wonder that the sea otter will be one of our most prized natural resources to be enjoyed by the vast number of devotees of nature. With our continued interest and support, this animal need never disappear from our coasts.

For further information on the sea otter and other threatened animals, send 15c to the National Wildlife Federation, 232 Carroll Street, Washington 12, D. C. for the 32-page booklet "Our Endangered Wildlife".

Modern "Iron Horse"

CONTINUAL SEARCH for efficient, light weight locomotives and trains has brought the Railroad Industry a long way from the "Iron Horse" of granddad's day. The pictured ACF "TALGO" represents the latest trend in rail transportation.

Lively competition keeps the railroads on the alert for ways to increase passenger comfort and decrease heavy maintenance costs.

In answer to these demands, Johns-Manville friction specialists joined forces with air brake experts of Westinghouse Air Brake Company to produce a revolutionary composition brake shoe called the COBRA SHOE. It is marketed by the Railroad Friction Products Corporation, a subsidiary of both Johns-Manville and Westinghouse.

The COBRA SHOE makes possible yearly savings up to $900 on each car in maintenance of rail equipment and offers passengers the comfort of fast, smooth, quiet stops. Its ability to reduce weight by as much as 3,000 pounds on some new cars makes it particularly adaptable for use on the modern light weight trains.

The Railroad Industry is only one of the major fields which the J-M team of research scientists, production personnel and sales representatives serve continuously. Their contributions help these industries make our standard of living safer, more efficient, modern and enjoyable.

CHAPTER XIII

Perry left the door of his son's room ajar and went downstairs. Sally was still washing the dinner dishes. Uncle Rip had departed. He wa going to spend the night with his sisters at the apartment in town.

The living room of Locust Grove cottage had the same polyglot appearance as the rest of it, but was comfortable and homelike. In one corner was Uncle Rip's desk. It had belonged to his father, and was a solid, flat-topped, baize-covered affair which looked as if it had been a stronghold for honorable dealings in the past and could never be associated with anything else. Hanging on the wall above it was a picture of its former owner, a conservative looking gentleman with keen eyes and a square cut beard.

In the opposite corner was an old fashioned square piano - a "Lemuel Gilbert" which had been a wedding present to Uncle Rip's mother. It dated back to Civil War times, but was still in good condition. The room was plentifully supplied with chairs, four of them being wicker rocking chairs which usually adorned the piazza in the summer time. There were some Frederick Remington prints and two handsome steel engravings on the walls, and a fire in the fireplace.

Perry picked up a book and sat down beside the double-decked oak centre table. He'd had rather a hard day and was feeling tired. Otherwise he would have wiped Sally's dishes for her. Shortly the heat made him drowsy. His eyes closed and his chin dropped forward onto his chest.

"Why don't you go to bed?" asked Sally, coming in from the kitchen and taking off her bungalow apron. "You're all tired out, and you don't get sleep enough."

" Whad,dya mean - I don't get sleep enough?" asked Perry opening his eyes.

"Well, you know that you don't. You didn't go to bed until after midnight last night, and you almost missed your train this morning. If you had your truck here it would be different, but you've got to get up and get the seven-fifty train tomorrow morning. And you know how hard it is for you to do that unless you've had at least eight hours sleep. So why not be sensible and go to bed now. I'm not going to have you fall down on the job just when you've got things coming good."

"Aw, fall down on the job, nothing!" rejoined Perry with some heat. "You've got too many brass hat ideas. Com'on and play cribbage. I'm not sleepy enough to go to bed," tossing aside his book.

Sally demurred, but finally consented. She liked to play cribbage, and Perry obstinately refused to go to bed. He had a constitutional antipathy to doing so at any time before midnight. It was a bone of contention between them, for Sally, who had been brought up on a farm, couldn't stand late hours, although she'd had to adjust herself to them since becoming a member of the Wentworth family.

"There," she said, rising and gathering up the cards two hours llater. I've beaten you three times running. Now let's go to bed."

"Pretty soon," said Perry, swinging his chair around beside the centre table again, and picking up his book.

"Perry Wentworth, you certainly aren't going to read any more now! It's ten o'clock, and you've got to get that seven-fifty train."

"I'll get it all right ; don't worry."

"Yes, you'll get it - just the same as you did this morning. I had to fairly haul you out of bed and put your clothes on you. And then you went off without any breakfast."

"Ah, go on. It isn't late and I'll be up in a few minutes. Go to bed yourself if you want to, and leave other people alone. I don't tell you when to go to bed and when to get up."

"Yes, and I guess you'd be sore if I laid abed in the morning the way you do." Sally leaned over and laid hold of the book. "You're going to bed, and you're going to bed now."

"Now, be sensible," retorted Perry, pulling it away from her. "It isn't late and I'll be up in a little while, I tell you. Don't be childish."

"I think you're mean - just as mean as you can be. You know I can't get to sleep until you come to bed."

But this elicited no response, and Sally took herself off upstairs in offended dignity. Sonny, little cherub, was laying on his back, sleeping soundlessly with a tiny fist drawn up and resting on the pillow on each side of his face. His Dolly, his "Piggy", a Teddy bear, and two or three auxiliary members of his menage were grouped around him. There was never any trouble about getting him out of bed in the morning, but getting him dressed was a pony from another paddock altogether.

"Mama's precious," breathed Sally, softly, as she kissed him and spread another blanket over him.

Perry wasn't in Barnsdale any more. His book was a was story, and he was once more over in France with the A.E.F. Spads, Samsons, Havilands Bleriots, Neuiports - they were all about him once more. He was listening to the crush and throb of their motors, and fighting off the caster oil fumes from the exhausts. And up yonder was a menacing and continuous rumble - a vibration of the earth towards which armed men in motor lorries and on foot were always making their way.

HUNGARIAN CHILD REFUGEES SENT EMERGENCY AID

Money and more than 10 tons of clothing from Save the Children Federation are being rushed from America for aid to Hungarian boys and girls, SCF President Dr. Richard P. Saunders announced today.

The Federation has cabled funds in answer to an urgent appeal for assistance from its representative in Vienna. A substantial shipment of children's clothing and layettes will leave the SCF warehouse in New York City tomorrow morning to be flown via Pan American Airways free of charge to refugees in Austria. Next week the S. S. Exchester of the American Export Lines will depart from Hampton Roads, Va., with more SCF clothing.

"More than 15,000 refugees have fled from Hungary into Austria, mostly women and children," Dr. Saunders stated. "Countless unaccompanied children — cold, hungry and lost — wear tags around their necks saying 'Please take me in. My mother and father are fighting to free Hungary.'

"For the relief of such youngsters Save the Children Federation is launching a nation-wide campaign to raise more clothing and money" SCF — an international nonprofit, nonpolitical, nonsectarian organization — has served needy children without regard to race or creed for the past 25 years.

Dr. Saunders stressed that his organization was emptying its warehouses in order to meet "one of the most tragic events in modern times." He urged Americans to help by sending cash contributions to "Hungarian Refugee Relief," Save the Children Federation, United Nations Plaza, New York 17, N.Y. He asked residents here to join with school children of this state who are now collecting clothing in Bundle Drives.

Chapin Chatter

I was thinking that a set of teeth are very much like a heating system.

Have you ever had a toothache?

I have, for the last week, and it struck me, very painfully, that teeth which are taken for granted over a good many years are much like a heating system.

In the beginning then teeth are whole and strong, and perform their duty without complaint. If given daily care and minor cavities are filled early and a thorough check is made at frequent, regular intervals, they will last for a lifetime. If however, they are taken for granted small cavities become large ones. Then an ache, agony, and loss of sleep and disposition, and then you lose it. If this continues tooth by tooth they're all gone with a series of agonizing sessions attending each one and you end up with a new set long before you should.

This process is not too different than what happens to a heating system.

When it is new, it functions beautifully; keeps you warm and cozy; and you don't have to think of it from one year's end to the next. If it gets a yearly check up, and as small troubles occur, they are remedied, the system will assure you of trouble free operation, free from small, or large expensive annoyances for many years.

So far the dentists have not offered an all coverage plan to take care of our teeth, but we, at Chapin-Nichols, have for your oil burner.

It's called Our PERPETUAL COMFORT GUARANTEE, And provides a yearly checkup, complete cleaning of the oil burner, and furnace. Any parts that are needed are replaced at that time. Any parts that are required throughout the year, which includes all parts; tank, combustion chamber, motors, transformers, controls, filters - everything - as well as all service calls through the years. At the same time we can advise of needed repairs on the heating system.

Call Mr. Nichols at Reading 2-3290 and we will be glad to tell you more about it.

Best Regards
Paul Rimbach.

WATCH YOUR EYES

Each year we Americans use our eyes to read approximately 18 and one-half billion newspapers, four and one-half billion magazines and 450 million books. To our forefathers, these seemingly astronomical figures would be hard to comprehend, for reading in their era was limited to an occasional newspaper or letter or the family bible.

To our ancestors these calculations would be beyond his reason, for his eyes were used for long distance viewing in hunting game and spotting the enemy. Our modern civilization of the printed page and the electric light is a mixed blessing, for it imposes great strain on our eyes through which we receive 83 per cent of our knowledge.

Two of the major causes of eye strain are prolonged use of the eyes and improper illumination. Very often, we can do little to damage the lenght of time we must use our eyes in the daily course of business. However, according to a spokeman for the Murine Company of Chicago, there are a numbr of basic rules for good eye care that should help us in our daily bouts with eye fatigue.

1. Make sure you practice good reading habits. The ideal reading situation is a 100 watt bulb about 20 inches form the page with the light coming over the shoulder. The lamp should be so placed that the light bathes the page you are reading with a glare-free, shadowless light. Hold reading matter slightly below eye level and about 18 inches away. Never read facing a window.

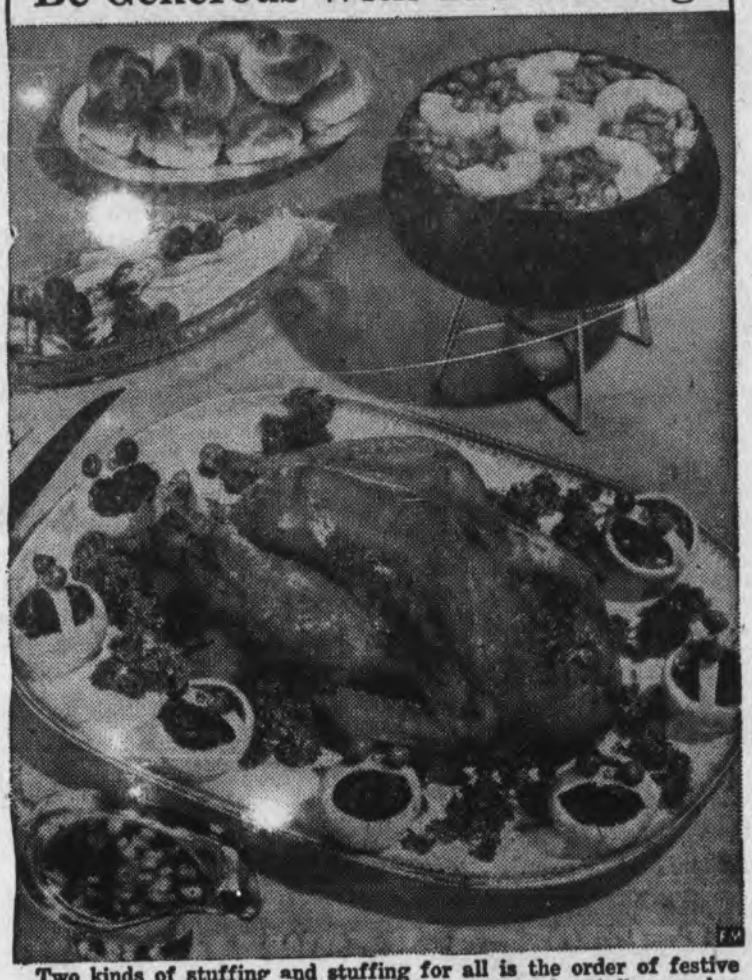

2. Have proper over-all room illumination. General lighting in a room is better than a pin-point light on your reading matter. Make sure that shiny walls, overhead lights, and table tops don't cause improper reflections at your vision point.

3. Rest your eyes. Even though the eye has overwhelming adaptability, and can be used for reading for hours at a time, occasionally look away from your reading material and do the following simple exercise. Look as far as you can to the right then to the left, close your eyes tightly then open them as wide as possible; blink them rapidly. A drop or two of eye lotion in each eye, will make them feel relaxed.

4. Practice good personal habits. Eyes are less irritated and less inclined to eye strain when you have enough sleep and practice modernation in day-to-day living.

SAFETY TIP: Driving under conditions call for EXTRA CAUTION, warns the AAA. Whenever it rains or snows — whenever the streets are slippery — these are the times to SLOW DOWN and TAKE IT EASY.

Be Generous With The Stuffing

Two kinds of stuffing and stuffing for all is the order of festive boards these days. It helps make the table groan and satisfies varying palates. Stuff the bird with the traditional family recipe and serve on the side a decorative casserole of pineapple stuffing.

PINEAPPLE STUFFIN'

2 tablespoons onion flakes
2 tablespoons parsley flakes
1½ cups water
2 bags cubed Arnold Stuffin'
½ cup butter
¼ cup crushed pineapple
4 canned pineapple rings
¼ cup almonds blanched
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup butter

Soak onion and parsley flakes in water. Mix with stuffin' and add the half cup butter melted and the crushed pineapple. Put into greased two-quart baking dish. Decorate with slices of pineapple brushed with melted butter. Bake uncovered in a 350° F. oven for approximately 45 minutes. Add blanched almonds which have been browned in butter and salted.

NAVY FOOD

Washington, D. C.—As U. S. Navy men around the world sit down to their Thanksgiving dinners they will have cause to thank "County Fairs" for the excellent flavor of the turkeys.

Navy Food Service Teams have been touring the world since 1953, bent on improving the meals served aboard ships and at shore stations.

When the teams first started their two-week visits to Navy galleys, resistance to their kitchen and dining hall tips developed from some of the old timers. They didn't like "outsiders" in their galleys, and the idea lingered that the food service team experts were holding an inspection.

The "Country Fair" is the plan that the teams have adopted to counter this unfounded idea. At the "Fairs" cooks from galleys in the area where the "Fair" is being held are invited to attend. They sit in to watch and judge the results of the visiting cooks and bakers.

As the pies, cakes ,salads, meats and other dishes are turned out by the team of experts, local cooks judge and score them, While nobody gets a blue ribbon for "best in show", this scoring leads to lively informal discussions of the right and wrong methods of food preparation. To get the feminine viewpoint, wives of the cooks are also invited.

Over 600 commands have been visited — and improved — by the eight teams stationed throughout the world.

The idea for teaching teams was worked out by the Navy in cooperation with the Food Service Advisory Committee of the National Security Industrial Association, a group which has been helping the Navy since 1946 to plan better use of excellent food — at less expense to taxpayers.

Eleven o'clock struck. Sally came to the head of the stairs in her bathrobe.

"Perry, arn't you coming? I've been up here waiting for you three quarters of an hour alrady."

'Yes, pretty soon," abstractedly.

'I want you to come now!'

Silence below. Perry was flying up the valley of the Meuse in a hail storm, trying to keep from crashing. He finally negotiated a forced landing which gave him a black eye and a broken tip to one of his wings.

"Perry, aren't you hateful!"

"For Pete's sake, why don't you leave me alone? Whey do you want to pester me every time I try to read a little? If I was some fellows I wouldn't be home at all. I'd be out sporting."

"Well, I like to read as well as anybody but I don't get drunk on it the way you do. You stick your head in a book, and then you're dead to the world for hours."

"Aw, go back to bed and I'll be right up as soon as I finish this chapter."

But when he reached the end of the chapter Perry wasn't conscious of the fact. He was rubbing elbows with the hero of the story who was taking an active part in the final "great push", driving north from Chateau Thierry with motorcycle units, field and heavy artillery, ambulance units, machine-gun battalions, trench-mortar batteries, pigeon, units strung out on every side of him. Perry read on for an hour.

A door opened, and Sally's voice floated arrestingly down the stairs.

"Perry, it's twelve o'clock, and if you don't come to bed this minute I'm coming down to smash the light bulbs."

"All right, dear. I'm coming."

Perry tossed aside his book. He was back in Blighty once more, but it seemed good to be "over there" again occasionally - in retrospect.

He really felt tired next morning, but managed to get his train and to eat a few mouthfuls of breakfast before doing so. He generally did feel tired in the morning - it was a family peculiarity.

Uncle Rip returned from Boston in the late afternoon, and cast a speculative eye at the Kenyon place as he walked up from the station. There were no signs of life. Elm Hill pasture was buried beneath a foot of snow, across which the long rays of the sunset cast a faint, rosy sheen. That woman Sam wanted him to marry - well, she might be desirable. He hoped she would be. A little flirtation wouldn't come amiss, but as for matrimony - that wasn't what it was cracked up to be. At his time of life and situated as he was . . . Better keep out of it. Single blessedness had its compensations, even in his case.

But Sam, the next time he saw him, was insistent.

"You're a hell of a community worker. It's fellows like you that make for poor government. D'ye know it?"

"Why? Because I won't marry a pig in a poke" asked Uncle Rip, opprobriously.

"You don't have to marry a pig in a poke. Get after her and look her over. She may be a knockout."

"Yes, but where is she? I don't mind looking her over, so far as that goes. She's probably over sixty, and wears false teeth."

"All the better for you. They'll be all bought and paid for."

But apparently Uncle Rip's accomodating disposition was in no immediate jeopardy. The Kenyon place, with its massive stone posts at the entrance to the driveway, its sixteen-room colonial house with the big square cupola on the roof, its long stretch of outbuildings and broad sweep of acreage, remained chastely aloof and untenanted. Clad in a chilly mantle of snow, it did not invite occupancy. The heater was out of order, and the house needed a lot done to it. If the woman who'd bought it had any sense she wouldn't try to open it up until next Spring.

So said those who were interested; and who in the "north Part" was not interested The matter was freely discussed in the place where such matters were usually dicussed - Olney Eames's grocery store which stood across the way from the North Barnsdale railroad station.

The store was a common meeting place for the homegoing public at the end of the day. Sam Westcott's closing whistle blew at four-thirty. The paper train from Boston pulled in at four-thirty-five. Workers from the factory and commuters from the train flocked into the store to get their evening paper and buy whatever they needed for supper.

For a town lying so near to Boston there was a wide variety of types. Business men in tweed and laborers in overalls rubbed elbows in neighborly amity.

"When are you going to plough out my driveway, Ike?" asked Everard Gowing, pausing on his way to the door with a loaf of bread under his arm.

Ike Meserve looked at the speaker for an instant with the questioning stare of one whose mental processes are slow to adjust themselves. He was a herculanean figure in a lumberman's jacket and boots. His face was chiefly remarkable for the size of his cheek bones behind which a pair of slaty blue eyes seemed alomst lost, although at times they roved restlessly from side to side as if seeking for something to hang a grouch upon. For Ike was a surly denizen of the out country, and his physical strength made him contemptous of the ordinary run of mortals.

He owned and lived on a small farm not far from Fresh Pond. Everybody knew Ike Meserve. He was the local man of all work. Ploughing, harrowing, mowing, grading, teaming, logging - he was a master hand at all of them. His principal asset was a pair of heavy work horses who had something of the same slow, flawless, irresistible physical power as their owner. Between man and beast there was a bond of understanding above the ordinary. Faced with a difficult task the horses calmly flicked their ears at Ike's Gargantuan profanity, and then proceeded to do as he wanted them to with a patient precision which seemed almost uncanny.

Ike had been talking with Maundy Leblanc about the Kenyon place. It was a subject in which he was interested, for the new owner would probably want some work done. Everard's question raised a new line of thought. But Ike had no sooner grasped it than he answered up promptly.

"Can't do it until I get the sidewalks all ploughed. The town ain't ploughing nobody's driveway this winter. That's up to the owner."

"Who said that?"

"Jim Sargent. He's super-

V.F.W. DUGOUT DOINGS

V.F.W. Christmas Cards have been mailed out to all post members. Commander McVeigh asks all comrades to purchase these cards and hopes this year's sale will be greater than last year's.

Veteran's Day services were held Monday, at the Wildwood Cemetery. This affair is becoming increasingly more impressive each year and it is this writers hope that in the future, the town will accept and support it. With all Vet organizations participating in the ceremony, this day, Nov. 11, will become a very important event in our town. To all our comrades who made the supreme sacrifice, we the Vets of Wilmington, salute you.

A special thanks to young Bob Kaszynski, of Jones Ave., who played the taps on his bugle in echo to Moe, at the plot.

Tom O'Conners did a real bang up job with the social, last Saturday night and the event turned out to be quite successful. He was ably assisted by Bill Simmons and Bill Bovitz and a good time was had by all.

John Demers held his Turkey raffle and drew the three lucky tickets Saturday night. Among the lucky winners were Joseph Lynch, Past Commander.

Joe Medico won the door prize, which was a soup or coffee warmer server. Fire Chief Art Boudreau was along with his pretty wife and a goodly representation from the Fire Dept. Chief Boudreau looked very well and it's nice to know that he's getting around so capably.

My many thanks to all comrade members, auxiliary members and friends who have been so kind to me these last few trying weeks. Being in the hospital wasn't too bad, I had plenty of company, lots of cards were mailed to me and the nurses were very pretty. Rita says she's glad I'm home, even if she has to put up with my growling. Come to think of it, after all the boys visiting me at all hours and having a little party while there, maybe the hospital was glad I went home too.

Our next meeting has been put over a week, until Nov. 29, and on that night we will have a final report of the Military Ball.

For the first time in ages, everyone is showing enthusiasm in all endeavors, social, work, and membership. At our last meeting, two new members were voted in. Welcome aboard men, bring in a friend or two, to increase our swelling membership drive.

All persons, post and auxiliary, are requested to turn in any newspaper clippings or pictures pertaining to post events of the past year. These items are to be used in our scrap book for this year, ending April 1957. I've been working on Bill Simmons to participate in this event and have elicited his promsie to help. I belive that the scrap book will be a very unusual one this year, all members and auxiliary are invited to help.

The Kiddies Christmas party is coming closer and closer. As all know, this is given for the children by the post and auxiliary every year. Let's make this year's party even greater than the past year and all members are urged to volunteer to assist in any way.

Next April is our 25th Anniversary of our charter. Much discussion has been held regarding the celebration of such an event and next meeting should be an interesting one to attend. Many tentative plans for it have been offered. Next meeting should decide on just what and when.

Just Wondering — Where Bill Berry, Charley McCann and Rudy Carasco were last social? How come you didn't make it — Jean? If every one enjoyed themselves at the social? How nice and easy it is, when all hands work together? Who will run the next social and what we'll eat? When Charley Nickerson ill be handing out cigars? How Sonny and Dotty Duffy are coming along? What happened, Frank?

ST. DOROTHY'S WHIST

The regular Friday night whist party will be held in St Dorothy's Hall, Nov. 23 at 8:30 in aid of the Parish Building Fund. Mrs. Gerald Schena is Chairman of this party with the following committee: Mrs. Thomas Lynady, Mrs. Helen Toomy, Mrs. Theresa Magro and Mrs. Claire Doyle.

The public is invited to these parties and refreshments will be served.

LOVERS AND NIGHT—TIME

L.G. Hanscom Field, Bedford, The glow of the nighttime sky is not totally dependent upon lunar influence, evidence of lovers throughout the centuries notwithstanding according to the findings of a group of scientist from Air Force Cambridge Research Center. Rather, their experiments have revealed, the glow is due to photochemical processes in the upper air.

Carrying on rocket firing experiments at Holloman Air Force Base, New Mexico which began sometime ago, a research team from the Geophysics Research Directorate of this Air Research and Development Command Center has verified the theory that the light of the night sky is partially due to photochemical proces s e s, one of which involves sodium vapor.

Scientists have long known that moonlight and starlight alone could account for only a fraction of the light reaching the earth from the sky at night. Sensitive instruments could detect a nighttime glow characteristic of the sodium element, and a recent rocket experiment on Novemmber 1, at the New Mexico site has revealed data about the cause of the sodium glow.

Previous rocket flights had furnished studies of sodium behavior at twilight when the sodium vapor, ejected from a rocket at high altitudes, was still in the direct rays of the sun. The November 1, flight, however, was a true nighttime sodium emission experiment, the first of its kind.

When the rocket reached an altitude of 30 miles, sodium vapor release was begun, carried to the peak of the trajectory at 85 miles and back down to 40 miles. Approximately four pounds of sodium vapor was evenly distributed along the rocket trajectory over that entire path. A yellow trail clearly visible to the eye was formed in the region 30 to approximately 60 miles, however, there was no visual effect produced by the sodium.

The intensity along the entire rocket trail, including the uppermost portion, was recorded photometrical l y. The region of maximum intensity, centered at about 60 miles, was tracked by the photometer for about 30 minutes.

The visible portions of the trail were photographed by special types of cameras, such as those employed by Harvard University for meteor photography, which allows the determination of the altitude and motion of the trail.

The rate at which the glow faded, the intensity at various altitudes and the sharp upper limit of the visible glow will furnish AFCRC scientists information which may allow a determination of the exact processes which takes place in the upper air. These determinations will also increase the Air Force's knowledge of the composition and state of the atmosphere in that region.

SAFETY TIP: When you're walking at night and there's no sidewalk, WALK ON THE LEFT, FACING TRAFFIC, advises the AAA. Wear something white so you're more visible to drivers. Use extreme caution crossing the streets; remember you can see the cars better than the drivers can see you.

How To Make Thanksgiving Different

By J. L. Walsh, Editor, Paulist Feature Service

JUST ABOUT every American family that can afford it will have a big Thanksgiving Day dinner this year.

These families will celebrate the day in three different ways.

THE FIRST FAMILY, we'll call them the Joneses, will have a meal that's almost big enough to break the table. Thanksgiving is a big day for them; all the family's home, and they really do it up big. Everything is different: dishes, silver, food. Or almost everything that is. If you look closely at the Joneses' Thanksgiving you'll see the meal begins the way their meals always do. Everyone is courteous and well-mannered of course, but no one is praying. No one offers a prayer of thanks. The Joneses have made a big celebration of Thanksgiving Day but they've forgotten what makes Thanksgiving Day a different day.

At the Smith's, our second family, more than food makes the day different. At the beginning of the meal, Mr. Smith nervously clears his throat a few times and begins a prayer he hasn't said in a year, while everyone uncomfortably shifts his feet and flushes a little red. Praying at meals is something different at the Smith's and anyone can see it. But at least the day doesn't go by without some effort to thank God for all His blessings.

WITH THE BROWNS, our third typical family, nothing seems different at all. The meal may be larger than usual and there may be more people around the table. But not even the guests seem uncomfortable as Mr. Brown begins the prayer and everyone bows his head. If they have been to the Brown's before they know that every meal begins and ends with a prayer of thanks.

If we were able to observe the Browns, and people like them, a little more closely, I think that we would find Thanksgiving really was different for them. I think we would find that they gave thanks not just at mealtime, but all day long. I think we would find that they had gone to church that morning and offered a sacrifice of thanksgiving to their Creator and Redeemer. We would find them sincerely grateful for all that God had given them. Not just for a big meal, but for sending His Son to redeem them, for the truth and the grace to save their souls and enjoy eternal happiness in heaven.

WHOM WILL you be like this Thanksgiving; the Joneses, the Smiths, or the Browns, It all depends on how you use your opportunity to make this Thanksgiving Day a different day.

† Paulist Feature Service, Washington 17, D. C.

PIPIT

Most Americans associate "Pupit" with the Word "Tawny" and if asked what the tawny pipit might be would say that it was a movie about dicky-bird watchers or something like that. While the "Tawny Pipit" was viewed by millions of Americans from coast to coast, it is doubtful if any Americans ever saw a free wild tawny pipit on American soil.

Americans who use the Peterson birds guides as their ornithological Bible might tell you that there were two pipits to be found in the country, the American Pipit pictured on this page and the Sprague's Pipit whose back is more striped and under parts less striped than the American Pipit. Each of these species shows white outer tail feathers and each wags its tail, bobs its head like a dove when walking, and walks rather than hops like a sparrow with which it might be confused by a careless observer. Offhand one might say that because of the white outer tail feathers there might be the suggestion that the bird observed was a Vesper Sparrow but the Vesper Sparrow hons like a self-respecting sparrow.

Unlike the sparrow, too, the pipits have relatively slender bills and this character will help distinguish pipits from the longspurs which are of course sparrows and have the characteristic coarse sparrow bill. Longspurs walk instead of hop normally but the white on the tail is usually not confined to the outer tail feathers as is the case with the pipits.

If one can master the confusion which may have been created by pointing to the slightly complicated nodding heads, walking legs and streaked upper or lower parts and wishes to go farther, he will find in Bent's books on birds of North America that there are really five kinds of pipits that have been found in America even though one of them, the Japanese Pipit, was never found here but once. Bent lists the American Pipit and the Sprague's Pipit of the Peterson book and the Meadow Pipit and Red-throated Pipit which we cannot consider in the space here allowed.

The American Pipit is probably better known in the West than in the East. It breeds from northern New Mexico and the high mountains of Oregon north to near the tree limit in Canada. There is an eastern and western race apparently. The center of winter abundance is in our Southwest or along the Pacific Coast north to Washington. The center of winter population in the eastern race is from New Jersey and Ohio to the Gulf Coast. In any of these areas the birds presence is more frequently noticed by the thin peeping call given when the birds are flying overhead in their characteristic flocks.

The Pipits are primarily insect eaters with records indicting that 70 per cent of the food may be injurious insects. The nest of the American Pipit is on the ground in open country. In the nest the bird lays from 4 to 7 eggs which are incubated probably for -13 or 14 days.

intendent of streets, you know. You c'n ask him if you don't believe me."

"Oh, I believe you alright. Well - come around and plough it as soon as you can. I'll pay you."

Ike grunted as the other departed.

"All them fellers up there have got their garages located down grade from the street, and way in back so'st they can't get their cars out if there's more than six inches of snow. Rip Wentworth's is the worst. You'd think he'd have more sense than that."

"Well,. Mist' Wentworth is a pretty smart man, and prob'ly he knows what he's about," grimmed Maundy cheerfully. He was a leathery little man with beady black eyes, and spoke in the clipped phrases of the French Canadian who has had to learn his English by practical experience.

"Naw, he don't know nothin' either," asserted Ike, dogmatically.

Folks say he does, but he don't. I'll tell ye," laying a finger which might have done duty as a tent peg on his companion's chest. "D'ye know what he done yesterday morning? I was plouging out that stretch of sidewalk in front of Luke Alden's land. Y'know there's a tree stands right in the middle of it; and there's a fence on one side, and the motor plough had thrown up the snow on the other so that I was having a hard time to get by.

"Rip Wentworth came along, on foot. He stood and watched me a minute and then he says, 'what you want to do, Ike, is to drive one horse on one side of the tree and the other on the other.' Now that shows you how smart he is." Ike's hairy physiognomy bristled disdainfully. "A man must be a gorram fule to think I c'd drive one of them hosses on one side of that tree, and the tother on the tother, when they was both hitched together."

Several of the bystanders edged nearer, grinning expectantly. They all know Ike Meserve, and while none dared take any liberties with him, they often got their money's worth without any exertion on their part.

"I tell ye the feller ain't smart atall. What d'ye spose he'd do if he ever had to earn a day's pay for himself. He don't never do no work. All you ever see him do is to walk around with his hands in his pockets."

"What's that you said, Ike " asked Uncle Rip, coming out of the little private office in the rear where he had been talking with Olney Eames. He had arrived from Boston on the 4:35, but had been closeted with Olney since getting off the train, so that nobody in the front part of the store knew he was anywhere around.

"I said I never see you doing no work aronud here," muttered Ike, surlily. He was considerably disconcerted by the other's unexpected appearance, and could think of nothing else to say.

Uncle Rip picked up the can of Bartlett pears which Olney set out on the counter in front of him, and looked at the speaker with tolerant amusement.

"Well no, you naturally would'nt. You see, Ike I work with my head and that's something that you don't know anything about." haws" which rattled harmhaw" which rattled harmless off of Ike's defensive armor he walked out and started for home.

"THAT LITTLE GAME"——————CO-ORDINATION

THE MIDDLE EAST

Eastern Mediterra n e a n Nov. 3 (Delayed) (FHTNC) The evacuation of United States citizens from the area of conflict in the Eastern Mediterranean has been completed, the U.S. Navy announced today.

Thus, proven once again, were the capabilities of the U.S. Navy to speedily deploy to any trouble spot a force sufficient to command respect and discourage hostile acts against U.S. citizens of National interests.

All American nationals who indicated a desire for transportation to safety have been removed. The evacuation was largely carried out by naval ships of the U.S. Sixth Fleet from Alexandria, Egypt and Haifa, Israel.

Some 1,700 persons were taken on board in these two ports. In addition U.S. Air Force and Navy transport planes, augmented by commercial aircraft, flew nearly 500 American personal from Tel Aviv. The Navy expressed deep appreciation to the U.S. Air Force for its valuable contribution to the evacuation.

Also on hand were U.S. Merchant ships that provid ed passage for some 300 persons from Alexandria. No casualities occurred among civilian personnel during the entire evacuation.

Combat Navy ships with evacuees aboard put in at Suda Bay Crete and thansferred passengers to a Navy transport for Naples, Italy. Planes from Tel Aviv deposited evacuees at Athens, Greece and Adana, Turkey. An undetermined number of U.S. Nationals remained in Egypt and Israel having declined the offer to be evacuated.

Despite the fact that air evacuation was prevented by the closure of airfields in the Egyptian area, the U.S. Navy was still able to safely evacuate the Nationals through an Egyptian seaport.

Senior Navy Commander in the Mediterranean trouble spot is Admiral Walter F. Boone, USN, Commander in Chief of U.S. Naval Forces in the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean, who flew from his London Headquarters and embarked aboard the USS Pocono with his operations staff Nov. 1, at Iskenderun, Turkey.

In charge of the Alexandria evacuation group was Captain F. W. Laing, USN, Commander of Transport Amphibious Squadron 6.

Washington, D.C. (FHTNC) - "U.S. Navy and Air Force transport aircraft flew into airports in the danger area without regard for their own safety," Admiral Arleigh A. Burke, USN, Cheif of Naval Operations said.

"The airfields and the aircraft landing on them could have been subjected to destruction at any time. This is another example of the close cooperation which exists between the U.S. services.

ARLINGTON FIVE CENTS SAVINGS BANK MAILING CHRISTMAS CHECKS

More than half a million dollars is being mailed to thrifty savers in Bedford, Arlington and vicinity, in the form of Christmas Club Savings checks, it is announced by Edward P. Clark, President of the Arlington Five Cents Savings Bank. The Bank maintains a branch office in the Bedford Shopping Center, 152 Great Road, Bedford.

The actual funds being sent to the Bank's 6,902 Christmas Club members is $518,697.00, an increase of $41,243,50 over a year ago.

Massachusetts ranks second to New York among the states in mutual savings bank Christmas Clubs. For this year. Massachuestts has had deposits of $34,035,-095.00 with a total of 419-515 members.

While a good portion of the Christmas Club money undoubtedly will be spent for the purchase of gifts from local merchants, part of the funds are usually redeposited at the Arlington Five in regular savings accounts, Mr. Clark stated.

The 1957 Christmas Club is now being opened at all of the Bank's offices.

The Arlington Five Cents Savings Bank, with its main office at 626 Massachusetts Avenue, Arlington Center, maintains two other Arlington offices - 190 Massachusetts Avenue, East Arlington, and 1300 Masachusetts Avenue, Arlington Heights.

MUSIC ACTIVITIES INCREASE IN BILLERICA SCHOOLS

By A. B. Horsfall

Altho music activities have been carried on in Billerica Schools for many years, and certain ones are required as a minimum by state regulations, there has been a recent increase as a result of P.T.A. and other citizen interest which may not be fully noted by townspeople. Even a little early music training and appreciation goes a long way in establishing a lifelong interest and even love, of what is so essential to a whole person, and a continuing resource in life.

Teachers

Two teachers spent full time in music in our schools, Mrs. Elizabeth L. Johnson, now in her 6th year in Billerica, who is Music Supervisor in the elementary grades: and Miss Claire Nanis, now in her second year in Billerica, who is Music Supervisor in the High and Junior High schools.

Mrs. Johnson is a graduate of Lowell High School and of Lowell Teachers College, where she majored in music, her field being voice. She is a pianist and singer, and her experience includes music instruction and supervision also in Lowell, Carlisle, Bolton and Stowe over a period of eleven years.

Miss Claire Nanis is a graduate of Malden High School, where she was a member of the band, orchestra and glee club, and a graduate of Lowell Teachers College, where she was school accompanist for the band and choir. She plays the saxaphone and viola, as well as being a pianist. Her experience includes Holyoke elementary school band work, and as Music Supervisor she started their strings program.

High School

Miss Nanis has initiated the class instrumental instruction program, now in its second year as a cooperative program with Lowell Teachers College, whereby five student-teachers carry on these classes providing free instrumental and music training to students here. There is also separate band work, which involves the most time and people and investment in instruments; and instruction of a select string quartet. This past May at the Watertown Music Festival, a class A rating was given the Billerica high school chorus, and again to the Billerica high school band, which included many Junior high school members.

Nanis Theory

Miss Nanis states that her theory is, briefly, "no forcing'. Students should try class instruction until they know how they like their instruments, and whether or not they wish to continue them. Class instruction for beginners thus allows them to experiment with different instruments, until they know they like the one or another, or don't wish to pursue it further.

From the viewpoint of both student and the school, the elementary schools program is designed to feed into the junior high program and then on to the high school program. "You dont just take a lesson, learn the scale, and stop," Miss Nanis points out. "You have to improve yourself, take lessons outside school." By the time high school age is reached, this seems essential. In the elementary school grades the students can start and experiment in class before the parents put out money for lessons; this objective alone makes it worthwhile.

Band Work

Band Committees have already done very good work in raising funds for instruments. The town now helps to the tune of $500 a year which is used in part for such instruments as the Sousaphone, and minimum instruments available for loan or rental to individuals.

To most people a marching band is a band; otherwise what have you got? "We're not ready yet," said Miss Nanis, for a marching band, altho by the time you read this we will have one, marching at the Chelmsford-Billerica game, largely a junior high band, composed of 44 youngsters, 25 from junior high, 6 from high and 13 from the elementary schools.

Uniforms will necessarily be distinguished: that is, you'll be able to distinguish some from the others, a virtue here arising from necessity, as sometimes happens. There are enough hats for everyone. Capes, "which fit anyone," which means everyone, will be used, as will a dozen sweaters. The 17 capes were bought to fit high school students, and, except what it doesn't look right, could easily fit 34 non-high school musicians. Miss Nanis believes capes are obsolete in today's bands. Her gradual program has progressed to the point where uniform caps are available for everyone, green caps with white visor: to be followed by completion of the uniform with green trousers with white stripe, green jackets, and white gloves. "We need a program to build up an inventory of uniforms in place of capes," and the like, she said. Saturday's tag day funds will go to this purpose, and good returns are counted upon in order to make caps available for everyone for the Thanksgiving game. Mr. Horace Brooks is Tag Day Chairman. The program is expected to take several years to complete. A complete uniform costs about $50.

Band Organization and Progress

There has been some feeling, Miss Nanis pointed out, by high school students against the "small kids" coming into the band. Originally they were brought there as extra members needed to fill out the ranks for a real band. Otherwise there'd have been only 12-13 band members.

At the beginning of school in 1956, there was an original list of six members only, interested in band work. Such participation is voluntary and actually an opportunity offered in our schools which does not require time for calls and salestalk from the school office. Whereupon a check against last year's list, one by one, elicited a fairly uniform response "I don't want to join the band." The same sort of check against the junior high list brought a response of 27 people. As a consequence the original schedule for 1956 was revised thus:

Original 1956

2 high, 1 junior, 1 junior chorus.

Revised 1956

2 junior (M, F) 2 high chorus (T, Th) 1 junior chorus (W).

These five periods are the activity periods, which begin the day.

Present Music Lineup

Thus today we have activity periods engaged as above each morning. In addition each day sees band marching practise. Now Thursday nights a select stringed quartet rehearses, composed of the following: Frank Bernaducci, 8 grade, violin; Robert Packard, 9 grade, violin; David Savage, 7th grade, viola; Val Paradise, 10 grade, cello. The quartet will play in public Dec. 4, a Tuesday, at a tea at the First Parish Church, in the Center. Furthermore, Monday evenings from 7 to 8:15 p.m. the junior high band rehearses, with Miss Eleanor Wain helping here, as elsewhere with these groups. The Wednesday Junior High chorus group above of 65 youngsters is supplemented by a selected chorus of 15 voices now rehearsing outside school hours.

Other Progress and Help Needed

Instruments belonging to the Billerica schools have been corraled and herded into one locked room, excepting a couple of straying violas, for which appeal is hereby made to return home, all will be forgiven. Lights in the instrument room should be kept in working order, and some desks are needed.

Incidentally, the present uniforms of white pants are too cold for Fall weather and flannel pajamas are recommended as an interior decoration and supplement.

Elementary School Music

Mrs. Johnson's typical week includes visiting the elementary schools, with each classroom visited each ten days at minimum, with one 30-minute period, wherein Mrs. Johnson demonstrates singing, rythms. The teachers carry on otherwise, and are observed during the month; and then confer with Mrs. Johnson in discussion of the program. Our state law requires a 20-minute-a-day minimum in grades one thru three for music and music appreciation, usually used for singing.

On Thursday there is an instrumental class at the high school for elementary school pupils, with about 120 children taking lessons on all instruments, being taught by five teachers from Lowell State Teachers College, under the supervision of Mrs. Johnson. These are free lessons given during school time, on instruments about three-quarters owned by the pupils, and also rented or allocated from school resources. One purpose of this is to develop pupils interested in going on into junior and high school band and other music work, as well as giving every elementary grounding in music.

The elementary schools are now working on Christmas programs, sponsored by the various PTA's, which will be presented in Dec. Already scheduled Wednesday the 19 at Ditson is a Nativity operetta; and Friday the 14 at Talbot the Christmas Story operetta.

Name Bay State 4-H Trip Winners

Laurence Taylor | D. Goldthwaite | Lorraine Bieniek | Patricia Jones

Massachusetts 4-H members were named state winners of a trip to the 1956 National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, Nov. 25-29. They were selected by the State Extension Service for having the best records in the 4-H Tractor, Clothing, Garden, and Girls' Home Economics national award programs.

Knowledge, skill, and good judgment are important factors in getting the most out of the 4-H Tractor program, and Laurence Taylor, 21, of Spencer has all three. A week at Club Congress provided by American Oil Company is his reward. A 4-H'er for eight years, Laurence learned that care is more important than repair for tractor operation on the family's 275-acre farm.

Laurence was put in charge of maintaining the two farm tractors—from greasing to checking batteries. He completed three years of 4-H tractor maintenance work. Last year he won over 18 boys in a county contest in tractor driving. He also took part in many tractor demonstrations. His 4-H Club leader is Albert E. Andrews.

It took more than a green thumb for David Goldthwaite of Framingham Center to win state honors in the 4-H Garden program. He not only learned to make his garden grow, but also how to market the products.

A Club member for seven years, this industrious 17 year-old increased his garden from 600 to 12,000 square feet.

David's family maintains a roadside stand where they sell more than 20 varieties of produce from the garden. The profits will finance his college education. David was prominent in 4-H camp, service club, county and state fair activities. His 144 exhibits won him many ribbons. Harold Bacon is Club leader.

This is the 11th year that Allis Chalmers, Tractor Group, has provided 4-H awards which include the Congress trip.

The parents of Lorraine Bieniek, of Adams, are mighty proud of her winning the 1956 state honors in the 4-H Girls' Home Economics program. Putting into practice what she learned not only enhances family living, but prepares this 17 year-old for her role as future homemaker.

Lorraine's eight years in Club work includes work in foods, sewing, dairy and flowers. She preserved a total of 444 pounds of food frozen and 245 pints canned.

A junior leader of her Club for four years, and treasurer for two she was very active in giving demonstrations, judging and showmanship. She won many first places.

Lorraine's Club Congress trip is made possible by Montgomery Ward, donor of awards in the 4-H Home Economics program.

Patricia Jones, 17, of Lexington is now in her seventh year of Club work. As state 4-H Clothing winner, she is the guest of Coats and Clark at the Club Congress.

Having a remarkable flair for making clothes, Patricia has completed 83 garments. They included date dresses, suits, blouses and skirts.

Besides deriving pleasure from her 4-H clothing project, Patricia has the practical viewpoint that her wardrobe of 83 garments are of better quality and workmanship than those bought in stores.

Throughout her 4-H career she contributed to the community welfare by volunteer work with the Salvation Army and Red Cross. Her local 4-H leader is Mrs. L. Norman Jones.

All these programs are conducted under the direction of the Cooperative Extension Service.

"MOTHER'S DEGREE" TO FEATURE OUTSTANDING TALENT, FRIDAY, NOV. 30

WILMINGTON HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM, 8 P.M.

The Mother's Degree sponsored by the Boston Chapter of the Order of DeMolay Boys and brought to Wilmington by the Adult Fellowship of the Wilmington Methodist Church will be held in the High School Auditorium, Friday evening, Nov 30 at 8 p.m. The moving presentation by a group of boys is open to the public.

Along with the presentation of the degree will be entertainment by the boys. J. Richard Boyce, accordianist, and George Snell, Guitar player will play "Rock and Roll", Popular Scoth Song, and the accordianist will play his own rendition of "The Holy City." These boys were first place winners in Somerville 1956 Kiwanis Starlight Show, and second place winners in the Reading 1956 Kiwanis Show. Both do considerable entertaining in the Boston Area. J. Richard Boyce was the third place winner in 1954 at the International Accordian Competition held in Ohio.

John Locke will act as the Master of Ceremonies. He is presently attending Emerson College and majoring in the field of Theater.

Paul Anderson will play the organ for the degree. Paul is the organist for the Boston Chapter and plays for other chapters in the area. At the present time he is the organist of his home.

The program has been arranged by James Davidson a member of the Adult Fellowship and advisor to the DeMolay Boys in Somerville. Tickets for this occasion may be purchased from any member of the group or at the door. The charge is 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children. It was kept this low in order that entire families may be able to attend, for children and young people will enjoy it.

Happy Yuletide Custom

This year add to Christmas fun by hanging stockings for every member of the family. Pictured for the man of the house is king-size sock that can be filled with a liberal mixture of Christmas candy and fruit, perhaps a tie clip and cuff links, or travel-size toilet articles. To top it off, there's a handsome Royal 500 pocket radio by Zenith, that slips into coat pocket as easily as in the stocking. Ideal for travel—the powerful 7-transistor pocket receiver performs in trains, cars, on planes.

TOWN MANAGER TO ATTEND GOVERNOR'S CONFERENCE

Boston—Hundreds of Massachusetts government administrators will attend the Seventh Annual Governor's Conference on State, Couty and Municipal Relations to be held at the Hotel Statler in Boston on Dec. 1.

Mayors, selectmen, city and town managers, county commissioners and school committeemen are among those who will take part. The conference is designed to serve as a meeting ground where officials at various levels of government can discuss current problems facing Massachusetts counties, cities and towns.

Governor Christian A. Herter and Governor-Elect Foster Furcolo will be the principal dinner speakers, and Assistant Secretary of Commerce Harold C. McClellan of Washington, will address a luncheon meeting.

Panel discussions by well-known, civic and industrial leaders and representatives of the press will be held during the day on the subject of (1) Problems of School Budgets, (2) Relationship of the General Court to Local Governments, (3) Industrial Development, and (4) the Press and Coverage of State and Local Government News.

Panel leaders include the following:

Problems of School Budgets and Finance: Mrs. George P. Morey, Selectman, Lexington, Chairman; Allen L Torrey, Amherst, Town Manager; Francis X. Collins, Mayor, Salem; Maurice C. Clemence, School Committeeman, Wellesley; John J. Desmond, Department of Education; Honore E. Savaria, West Springfield; and Semion Domas, State House.

Community Business and Industrial Development: Josesph F. Courtney, Town Manager, Wilmington, Chairman; John J. Buckley, Mayor, Lawrence; Richard Preston, Department of Commerce; O. Edwin Swenson, Selectman, Natick; Patrick H. Harrington, Jr., Fall River; Gerald W. Blakely, Jr., Cabot, Cabot & Forbes, Boston; Harold O. Ulrich, Labor; and Robert A. Chadbourne, Assistant Vice President, Associated Industries of Massachusetts.

Press and Coverage of State and Local Government News: Edgar Mills, Chairman.

Relationship of General Court to Local Government: Representative Hollis Gott, Chairman; Speaker Michael Skerry, Representative Frank Giles; Senator John Powers; and Senator Newland Holmes.

POLLUTION' FLOOD CONTROL AND CONSERVATION GAINS ON CONCORD RIVER

There is very good news from up the Concord River which will interest many and affect indirectly all Billerica residents.

Soil Conservation engineers have been working now for some time on the elimination of the annual flooding of the Concord River. Most Billerica people will remember that two summers ago Elsie Avenue residents were several feet deep in water, and the Concord River was flowing over the River St., bridge, so that traffic was closed off. Previous floods have been much greater, and each season brings at least a mild flooding. The rains which brought this here were exceptionally heavy elsewhere thruout the U.S., and resulted in Federal funds being allocated for flood control. These engineers are coming to some conslusions different from those originally set forth.

The first is that you can't just dig a ditch, line it with concrete, get rid of the water as fast as possible, and that's all there is to it. Nature has built in some flood-control factors, especially the bordering marshes and meadows. These and a system of reservoirs now existing may be used to even out the flow, storing in flood times, and releasing in dry times. For Billerica, this means that he so-called Fordway Bar, just above the Pollard Street bridge in No. Billerica, will be left alone, and not blasted out, as once proposed. Concretely, the figure now discussed for year-round water level is 113 feet. This will give a much higher minimum than now. The results will be fine for the whole valley.

Wildlife will benefit tremendously. Now four or more feet of water covers marshes at one stage; so that no shelter is offered marshbirds and ducks. And in summer water level drops to leave dried marshes. No food and no shelter is followed by no water. Thus the future for fish, muskrats, ducks and marshbirds will bright with the greatly increased carrying capacity of marshes kept at about 113 feet of water heighth.

Most Billerica people hardly realize that around $50,000 worth of furs are taken from this river valley each year: muskrat, even otter and mink.

The Concord River has been polluted for some time now. When we saw the green duckweed appear several years ago, that was the beginning of so much pollution that the river no longer could clean itself by its own flow. Its chemistry had changed: mainly no longer enough oxygen, but too much nitrogen. This was mainly due to Framingham and Natick sewage effluent, treated to be sure, but releasing nitrogen which fed the green duckweed. Now Framingham has diverted this flow to the Metropolitan Sewage System, and other cleanup work means that there will be "the elimination of sewage. . . within a few years," according to the official report.

Any waterfront property, on the Concord or Shawsheen rivers, or on Nuttings or Winnings Lakes, will be more valuable in every way, and make for a better town, if clean enough for human uses, mainly recreational. Residential values thruout the town are surely if indirectly affected.

Upriver at Wayland, for example, they are raising $8,000 to buy about 70 acres of wilderness forest, where the brooks start that feed this river. The real estate developer, who was about to build 14 houses on 34 acres of land, not so good for houses, but wonderful woodland, agreed to g've them an option and delay start of building. Another citizens organization already has acquired over 200 acres of land Sudbury way to help keep the Sudbury River in its natural state. Wayland citizens offered to give about 36 acres more to add to the developer's 34 acres. They felt that prompt action was needed, that every passing months saw some potential wilderness being destroyed forever.

These lands are a little different from the town forest lands. They are picked with view of developing a plan of land control which will protect the headwaters of our rivers from private exploitation. The lands taken are poor land for real estate development, actually, but are beautiful areas forested with trees and shrubs. They will be kept in their natural state. And this action is all local, a local citizens' responsibility. The Concord River, and upriver the Sudbury and Assabet Rivers, which join together at Concord to start the Concord River, offers in its adjoining woodlands a specialized type of wildlife habitat which remains one of the largest in New England. Our problem is one which is urgent thruout the country: protection of such natural resources from private exploitation.

Now opinions differ, as do interests. A good example of what Billerica opinion is, will be offered by what happens to the glue factory site, especially whether or not it goes to industrial use. Those interested in anything but practical solutions to such problems will have to be vigilant. We have town forest areas, too, and these are not going to be held without just some vigilance. Immediately practical and profitable solutions to private individuals often are impractical and losing solutions for everyone. In very recent times we have given over 500 acres of town forest to the state, in order that it take over its operation, and split up a town forest preserve which is now bisected by the new route No. 3 as it goes by Nuttings Lake. Most citizens don't even know this.

Reward!!!

Offered if you don't find some excellent bargains at the Wilmington Rotary Rummage Sale, Saturday, Dec. 1, next to the Wilmington Plumbing Supply, formerly George's, Main St., Wilmington Center.

SAFETY TIP: Driving under conditions call for EXTRA CAUTION, warns the AAA. Whenever it rains or snows — whenever the streets are slippery — these are the times to SLOW DOWN and TAKE IT EASY.
